Almost all water on Mars today exists as ice, though it also exists in small quantities as vapor in the atmosphere, and occasionally as low-volume liquid brines in shallow Martian soil. The only place where water ice is visible at the surface is at the north polar ice cap. Abundant water ice is also present beneath the permanent carbon dioxide ice cap at the Martian south pole and in the ...

Lunar water is water that is present on the Moon. Liquid water cannot persist at the Moon's surface, and water vapor is decomposed by sunlight, with hydrogen quickly lost to outer space. However, scientists have conjectured since the 1960s that water ice could survive in cold, permanently shadowed craters at the Moon's poles. Water molecules are also detected in the thin layer of gases above ...

In total, human activities have emitted over 500 billion tonnes of carbon (hence over 1850 billion tons of CO₂) to the atmosphere since around 1750, some 65% of that being from the burning of fossil fuels [18,45,46,47,48].

by Fred Haynie I conclude that, the IPCC's model assumptions that long-term natural net rate of accumulation is constant and anthropogenic emission rates are the only contributor to total long-term accumulation of atmospheric CO₂, is false. All the data I have analyzed are evidence that reported monthly averages are measurements of a global distribution of
